

COVER LETTER

Berlin, 13403

Monday 10th of September 2018

Dear Hiring Manager,

I'm a young full-stack JavaScript web developer looking for a new position. I have experience both in front and back end, with techs, frameworks and libraries such as Node, Express, React.js, Vue.js, Socket-io, Redux.js, Handlebars, jQuery, Amazon Web Services, and some others (see my portfolio at: <https://sergioherrero-portfolio.herokuapp.com/>).

I think I'm most fit for the job because I'm a person that can't stay in the comfort zone, and have a passion for learning just about anything, and fast. For instance, I moved to Berlin over a year ago because I wanted to found a hardware company without previous experience in the field, and I was able to file a successful patent application on my own. In software, (besides web development) I taught myself Python and machine learning, getting to be familiar with libraries and syntax. Although I have never used it professionally. My favorite things to do is automation of processes and refactoring code to be as efficient as possible. "Nothing will be left hard-coded".

All in all, I think I'm a trustworthy and necessary asset for any company I work for. My love for business and entrepreneurship makes me see the problems from the company's perspective, and therefore be motivated to sacrifice long hours of work for the bigger goal. In summary I'm one of those persons that when assigned a new task you never have to worry about the outcome, because I'll always do my best on that assignment, never cutting on corners or making it easy on myself.

Thank you,

Sergio Herrero
